During the month of June, the actions of this animal appeared very different from what we have noticed at any other time. They swam in pairs, remained for a longer time at the surface, and seemed to be borne along by the tide rather than urged forwards by their own volition. They moved in half circles, lying rather upon their sides, and occasionally lashing the water into foam with their tails--then both disappearing, one in a few seconds would rise at a little distance as if pursued--make a short leap above the surface of the water, and on falling, again-commence the same kind of semi-circular movement above described, accompanied by the other. We never observed them to show the beautiful inferior surface of their bodies at any other period, or to raise the tail fin above the water. But at this season, the whole inferior surface of the body on one side, was frequently visible, and the tail occasionally whirled in air, and brought down with great force. We would have inferred that these movements belonged to their ordinary gambols, was it not for the fact that they all appeared to be paired off, and almost all the pairs seen at this time were similarly occupied. With the exception of a lapse of about three weeks in the month abovementioned, we have never observed them to act in the same manner. During the period referred to, we spent a part of every day in...
