Excerpt: . . . Who is that behind the big chair asked Janet. Kleins sister, Mog, said the great-aunt, gently. Come here, Mog! Mog came slowly forth, and stared at the Kanter girls from under her heavy eye-brows. Who is in that earthen crock behind you demanded Janet assuming a stern tone. Prue felt distressed at Janets persistence, but the greataunt answered very softly, It is little Guld! And bending over the crock, she lifted him out. He was smaller than any of the others, with shrewd eyes and warlike fists, but when Janet laughed, little Guld looked up at her and laughed back again. Janet was no longer in doubt. I am so glad we have found you, she said, cordially. You are kobolds, I am sure, and I suppose there are dozens more of you in those dark corners. We didnt know you were in the...
