Not illustrated. 1917 Excerpt: . . . needed gold when they adopt policies that demand it. The studies also indicate that in the United States trade with South America the balances are fairly even with each of the important different countries excepting with Brazil, where the balance is heavily against us. There is nothing in the data to indicate exactly how we settle our balance with Brazil. We certainly do not ship her gold. The balance is, of course, settled, as every business man knows, by our shipments to a third country, chiefly England, which, in turn, makes its settlements with Brazil. We are thus paying for our Brazilian coffee and rubber with our wheat and corn and other raw products. All these indirect methods of settlement, of course, mean added trouble and added expense. The chief single method of improvement that we could make, as indicated by these trade balances, would be to stimulate very largely our exports direct to Brazil, and then to make them exports of manufactured goods that would help both Brazil and the United States. In all the countries, however, we need to provide exchange facilities, so that also the profits from the exchange process itself would come to the United States rather than go through European countries.
